One Sloane

Just last week, One Sloane opened the doors to its new top-floor restaurant and downstairs bar, which for those who appreciate immaculate interior design as well as delicious French cuisine, must book immediately. Artfully blending French elegance with Chelsea's unique allure, this dining haven is a brainchild of Jean Louis Costes and the creative genius of architect and decorator François-Joseph Graf—that's sufficiently glitzy for its location but trendy enough to outrun any ounce of Chelsea stuffiness. Its charm and good looks extend elegantly to the restaurant, which serves a crowd-pleasing selection of 'Costes' classics with a Parisian twist. When V.F. stopped by (albeit a bit early for dinner), we were reassured of their round-the-clock service, meaning you can indulge in any dish at whatever time—a late lunch at 4pm? Not a problem. Breakfast at lunchtime? Why not? It's refreshingly convenient. Start the evening off with a perfectly chilled and delightful signature dirty martini, (or filthy like V.F. takes it) whilst you peruse the elegant, yet refined menu. Then, it was onto the zesty tuna and creamy avocado entrée before of course, the spicy lobster pasta, paillard de poulet and “pommes allumettes”(matchstick potatoes)—which were simply parfait! It goes without saying that the staff are immaculate too, especially with Ena on wine and the charismatic Dan running the front of house—trust us when we say good times and full glasses are guaranteed.
